Background

Allied Media Projects (AMP), created approximately 20 years ago, cultivates media for liberation. Rooted in Detroit and connected globally, AMP is a network of media makers, artists, educators, and technologists working for social justice. Through its programs, AMP envisions and attempts to model a world in which we cultivate care and joy, dismantle harmful systems, and assume responsibility for creating new and liberatory ways of being.

AMP's current programs include:

- The Sponsored Projects Program which provides fiscal sponsorship, training and capacity building to people and projects aligned with AMP's mission;
- The Allied Media Conference, a convening of AMP's vast network where participants celebrate, strategize and skillshare;
- The Speakers Bureau which disseminates the skills, ideas and media of the AMP network to the wider world.
